

*Dear
Young Person*

The Crosswinds Street Outreach Program has several staff members and peer educators that can help you. We work with young people 10-21 years old. We distribute food, clothes, and hygiene products. We can also assist you with obtaining housing, ID's and employment.

But, most importantly we are here to listen. If things are not going well at home or in school, we are here. If you have been abused, scared, or homeless, an addict, or disabled we can help. Don't be afraid to call. All of our services are free. Our program also provides individual and family counseling.

Please call us at 321 452-0800 ext. 144. We won't judge you or try to change you, we will just offer support. If we can't help you, we will know someone who can, so please call. Everything you share with us is confidential.

*Take care,
Jan*

CROSSWINDS' Street Outreach

Crosswinds Youth Services' Street Outreach program targets the needs of at-risk, runaway and homeless youth by providing services on the streets of Brevard County. The Outreach Team is on the streets four or more nights a week, connecting with youth where they are, building rapport and trust and providing immediate assistance.

They talk to youth about shelter options and hand out snacks, clothes and hygiene packs. Youth can receive these services without questions. They are also given information and referrals for other needed services, including medical clinics, food banks, GED assistance, and job training programs.

It is important to make a connection with youth in their first 90 days on the streets. Crosswinds' goal is that all youth exit street life. After immediate needs are met and trust develops, long-term solutions to leaving street life are addressed.

Safe Place

Crosswinds Youth Services' Street Outreach program works hand in hand with the National Safe Place program. Any youth in need of services can call Crosswinds' Robert E. Lehton Children's Shelter for immediate help:
